Red dress essay

Everyone has different things happen to them in their own life. Some of the people have a happy life, but some people don't. There is no perfect life in the world, no one can do anything to the best. There should have a person or the people are going to influences you, it doesn't metter who it is, maybe is your family or your friends. Although these people will influence you, but there are problems or questions that still have to be solved by yourself; other people can just only give you some opinions. In "A Red Dress", by Alice Munro, a young girl goes to a dance in a home made red dress. She is not happy about the dress, but she wears it anyway. She does not have a good time at the dance, but she does not tell this to her mom.

The protagonist in this story is very pitiful in the beginning. She thinks she is the most pitiful person in the world, but she starts to solve her problems by herself. She starts to express her views, and was able to live a life of her own only after her encounter with Mary Fortune. Without Mary Fortune the girl would never have found herself and realized the power of judgment. The girl learns that self-expression is a form of self-acceptance and with the help of Mary Fortune the girl is finally able to strip herself of the red dress.

The narrator in this story has a sad start to her life, because whatever she did, she won't be sucessful. She thinks she is a most pitiful person in the world. The dance is coming soon, she has to go to the dance, but she is not very happy about her dress, because her dress was made by her mom. She wants a dress that is bought from a store. When she saw a red dress made by her mom, she was very disappointed and sad. She thinks this red dress is very ugly, but she didn't tell her mom, she still wear this red dress to go to the dance.

Although this girl is not happy about her life, but she doesn't tell anyone. She has accepted her life for now. After she goes to the dance, she has other problem, she doesn't have the dancing partner, everyone has their own dancing partner. Some of the people has the partner is because they got the boyfriend or girlfriend, but she doesn't have a boyfriend.

When the dancing started, there is a boy called Raymond. He invites the girl to dance. The girl was very nervous, because Raymond is a boy that she has never talked to and barely recognizes. So the girl was very happy Raymond met her and invites her to dance, at this moment she feels her life is not so hopeless after all. After the dance over, Raymond walks back home with the narrator, her friend Lonnie and another boy.. Raymond, however, is always talking about a hockey game with other boy. The narrator does not understand what he is talking about. When he and the narrator are alone, he keeps on talking about the hockey game, as if his friend is still there.

Raymond has a runny nose, and the narrator gives him a tissue. The narrator thinks this is why she is kissed on the corner of the mouth before he left. When she gets to her house, she sees her mom waiting for her. We then learn whatkind of person she is. She is angry at her mom, but she knows what will make her mom happy.

How to make her mom to be happy? The only person that can make her mom happy is this girl. Her mom was very care about her daughter's future. When her mom at her age, she didn't have any pretty dress, nice memory, and the dancing partner. Now, her mom saw her has a most pretty dress and the dancing partner with her, and also the boy walk back home with her. Her mom feels very happy.
